Heimes Drafts Protested.

Two weeks ago we mentioned the fact that some of the drafts put is circulation here by Holmes had been presented to the Assistant Tress urer in New York and that he had refused to pay them because the drawer had no funds to his credit.

The following should have been instrumental in placing a knave in a position to swindle its citizens. But those who appearated upon the drafts, by shaving and otherwise, are not the suiferess. Whilst they gave the paper a sort of credit by circulating it they were careful to keep their names off of it and thereby avoided any responsibility that might attach to an endorser. The largest number of the drafts were made payable to the order of members of the Legislature. Some of these were remitted to New York shortly after the adjournment of the Legislature last winter and were paid. But many of them were retained here because they answered the purpose, for the time being, of a circulating medium, and holders did not care about scading funds to their eastern correspondents, alout the payment of which a very grave doubt stated.
